

Afik Tori: Financial Markets Analyst & Podcast Host

Afik Tori is a distinguished thought leader in the world of financial markets, economics, and consumer sentiment. With a deep understanding of both macroeconomic and microeconomic dynamics, Afik has dedicated his career to educating and informing the public about how global events shape market behavior and individual financial decisions.

He is best known as the host of the podcast 'Markets Made Simple,' where he breaks down complex economic topics into clear, engaging insights for both casual listeners and financial professionals. His ability to communicate intricate economic trends and investment strategies has earned him a loyal audience across multiple platforms.

Afik's areas of expertise include foreign exchange markets, global monetary policy, inflation trends, and the impact of geopolitical shifts on currency valuations. His work frequently explores how consumer psychology and media narratives influence market behavior, offering listeners a comprehensive view of how global economies function.

Though his academic background remains a subject of curiosity, his content and commentary consistently reflect a deep, research-driven approach, drawing from real-world case studies and historical data.

In addition to his podcast, Afik is active in digital media, contributing to finance forums, industry events, and economic blogs. His mission is to make market knowledge accessible, especially for those seeking to understand how economics directly impacts their lives.

Listen to the 'Markets Made Simple' Podcast on Apple Podcasts